

NORTH CAROLINA YOUTH SOCCER ASSOCIATION

ACADEMY PROGRAM RULES

Updated 8/16/07

Philosophy

"True player development focuses on the development of the player, not the development of the team! Up to age 12, this should be the only criteria used in designing and running youth soccer programs."

Ron Quinn, leading contributor US Youth Soccer Programming

More than 73% of all kids who play organized youth sports end up quitting by the time they reach the age of 13 (Time Magazine, July 12, 1999)

The major two reasons children give up sport:

- 1. It's no longer fun
- 2. It's too competitive/too much pressure

"The emphasis on winning is a detriment to young players because it prevents us from developing technically proficient players. And we're not giving them the ability to make decisions. 'We want competition. They'll always be competition and it's not bad. The bad part is the emphasis on winning.'"

John Hackworth, U.S. U-17 national team coach

"Worrying too much about winning and losing gets in the way of development. There are always shortcuts that you can find to win the next game. That doesn't necessarily mean you'll be winning five, six years from now. The kids all try to win anyhow, so I don't think we need to add to this. No kid ever steps on the field and says, 'Today I'm going to lose.' They're naturally competitive. We should be concerned about the players' performance, not the final score."

Manfred Schellscheidt, Head of U.S. Soccer's U-14 program
